SEPTEMBER 29

Doug Saunders discusses Maximum Canada

During most years before 1967, a greater number of people fled Canada than immigrated to it. Canada's growth has left us underpopulated. Our small population continues to hamper our competitive clout, our ability to act independently in an increasingly unstable world, and our capacity to build the resources we need to make our future viable. To avoid global obscurity and create lasting prosperity, to build equality and reconciliation of indigenous and regional divides, and to ensure economic and ecological sustainability, Canada needs to triple its population.

Doug Saunders is The Globe and Mail's international affairs columnist. He has won the National Newspaper Award (the Canadian counterpart to the Pulitzer Prize) on five occasions and awards honouring him as Canada's best columnist in 2006 and 2013.

David Bezmozgis discusses Immigrant City

In these deeply felt, slyly humorous stories, Bezmozgis pleads no special causes but presents immigrant characters with all their contradictions and complexities, their earnest and divided hearts.

Immigrant City was a Giller Prize Finalist, a Globe & Mail Best Book of the Year, and a CBC Best Book of the Year.

OCTOBER 6
