

PR Account Executive: Wavelength PR

The company

I run my own PR company, Wavelength PR and I'm looking in the next couple of months to hire a PR Account Executive to work remotely for me and take on some project work to assist me with current and future clients.

I work with a range of clients across different sectors, including charity, health/fitness, tech, lifestyle, travel and property.

The majority of my work is securing media relations for clients (consumer and trade, broadcast, print and online), managing their social media accounts and (pre-Covid) organising a range of events, which can range from big charity dinners to smaller fundraisers, talks etc).

The role

A student who has just graduated or maybe graduated 3 or 4 years ago and is looking for a career in PR/social media marketing would be perfect for this role. It will be paid work and ideally, I'm looking for someone who can work full-time.

You don't need to have PR experience as I will train you, but you must understand a bit about social media and be willing and quick to learn.

I need someone who is:

- Organised
- Works efficiently
- Punctual
- Reliable
- Has a good grasp of grammar
- Can hit the ground running and is happy to undertake online research, compile mailing lists, help run some of my clients' social media accounts and eventually, when events start to take place again, assist me with the organisation of client events.

I am also willing to pay a commission to the successful applicant for each new client that he/she brings into the company.

If you think this is you, please email your CV and some information on why you think you would be good for this role to Lydia Drukarz on: lydia@wavelengthpr.com

Looking forward to hearing from you soon!

* * * * *