

ELECTION ISSUE

HEALTH CARE

We can choose to help people. Choose to protect jobs. Choose to build hospitals and cancer centers. And still grow the economy.

Only one party has defended our schools, hospitals and public services while keeping Alberta's economy growing and the budget on track to balance.

Albert needs a government that will protect a strong universal public health care system, not bring in American-style private for-profit health care.

Election Day
April 16, 2019

Every step of the way Rachel Notley has fought to protect our public universal health care system in Alberta. She cancelled the Conservatives unfair health premium. She has funded health care, preventing the catastrophic layoff of thousands of health care workers as planned by the former Prentice government.

Despite Jason Kenney publicly signing a “guarantee” for public health care, the reality is that the United Conservative Party’s policy is to support American style private, for-profit health care in Alberta. The risk to health care and to Albertans is too great to stay silent. Alberta needs to invest in health-care, not cut it.

We need a premier who can be trusted to fight for quality, universal public health care in Alberta.

HEALTH CARE

Rachel Notley has:

- Improved patient safety and wait times
- Built new hospitals and expanded existing facilities

- Met commitments to build long term care
- Expanded mental health services

Will introduce new measures to:

- Reduce wait times
- Strengthen the rights of women to get critical health services
- Reduce the costs seniors pay for the drugs they need
