Walk the Extra Mile

In a world where communities are being displaced by the catastrophes of war, famine, and natural disasters, the Church is called to reclaim the spiritual discipline of solidarity. Christians are summoned to adopt and live out a “theology of acompañamiento [accompaniment],” in the words of the theologian Roberto Goizueta. As natural, economic, and political forces disrupt and uproot communities, the Church is called to stand in solidarity with those who seek to move beyond the trauma of displacement toward a promise of healing and peace.

The story of Ruth is ultimately about this solidarity. Naomi and Ruth were very much like today’s refugees: they never chose to move from country to country, rather, it was imposed upon them by forces beyond their control. They lived in a society where the patriarchal economy meant that a woman’s livelihood was entirely dependent on her male relationships (father, husband, even son). Yet when that system failed them, Ruth chose solidarity with Naomi over despair, and accompanies her mother-in-law to pursue a livelihood for both of them.

This option for accompaniment is truly a biblical principle that saturates the pages of scripture. From God who is present with Hagar in the desert and calls her to remain close to her son Ishmael (Genesis 21), to the Parable of the Sheep and Goats where the criterion for judgement is that of compassionate accompaniment (Matthew 25), to St. Paul’s exhortation that Christians should “rejoice with those who rejoice [and] weep with those who weep” (Romans 12:15). This promise to walk together is mutual and reciprocal, where both parties are in need, and both experience the real power that emerges from the spiritual discipline of solidarity.

Ruth’s promise to Naomi defines what solidarity authentically entails, and it stands as a challenge for Christians today to walk with refugees as they build new homes in strange lands.

Through the One Great Hour of Sharing offering, we, as the body of Christ, have opportunity and power to help those who are living in despair as refugees. If refugees had the choice to return home, many would not have a place to return because their home most likely has been destroyed—either burned, severely damaged, or is still an unsafe place to live.

This year as you consider your gift to the One Great Hour of Sharing offering, for one moment, think of what it would be like to not have a place to call home, and then make your very best gift. Let us make Ruth’s promise our own. Let us live out the call of solidarity with all people, especially those displaced by disaster, war, and famine.

Thank you!

Liturgy

Call to Worship/Reading from the Psalter (based on Psalm 146)

Leader: Praise God!

People: Praise God, O my soul!

Leader: I will praise God as long as I live,
People: I will sing praises to my God all my life long.

Leader: Do not put your trust in princes,
People: In mortals, in whom there is no help.

Leader: Happy are those whose help is the God of Jacob,
People: Whose hope is in God,

Leader: Who execute justice for the oppressed,
People: Who give food to the hungry.

Leader: Praise God!

All: Praise God, O my soul!

Prayer

God of Naomi and Ruth, in our journeys through life, we have been both broken and blessed. In solidarity, you accompany us. You receive us as we are, in our own weakness and vulnerability. For your immanent presence in our journeys, we are ever grateful. With thankful hearts we gather as your people to praise you for redeeming us. And by your Word and through your Spirit, we ask that you transform us into redeeming and reconciling people in the world. We pray in the name of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, now and forever. Amen.

Scripture Readings

Old Testament—Ruth 1:6–18
Epistle—2 Corinthians 5:16–21

Reading of the Gospel

Gospel—John 15:1–17 (or 12–17) or Matthew 5:38–48

Prayer of Confession

Leader or all: God our Redeemer, you are “our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble” (Psalm 46:1). You accompany us in moments of blessedness and in periods of brokenness. Yet at times we fail to recognize your presence and choose instead to live in self-centered reliance as though we are in isolation. In turn, we treat others in the same way, especially the most vulnerable. Unlike Ruth and Naomi, we live up to Orpah’s namesake and have turned the “back of our necks” to others.¹ We give into the fear of uncertainty instead of the grace of solidarity. We confess that by expulsion or neglect, we push away “the other” who seeks refuge in our midst, ignoring that you are the Redeemer who offers refuge to all. Free us now from our suffocating isolation, that we may breathe anew your liberating Spirit, the source of all compassion, the strength of all justice. We pray in the name of Christ Jesus and by the power of the Holy Spirit. Amen.

Assurance of Pardon & Passing of the Peace

Leader: Scripture bears witnesses to a God of justice who “sets the prisoners free” and “lifts up those who are bowed down” (Psalm 146:7–8), a God of grace who has “reconciled us to himself through Christ” (2 Corinthians 5:18). Therefore be assured, sisters and brothers, that our God liberates, Christ reconciles, and the Spirit lifts us up!

People: Praise be to God! Amen!

Leader: As a redeemed and renewed people, let us share the peace of Christ with one another.

¹Orpah’s name means “back of the neck.” Orpah is the daughter-in-law who goes back to Moab.
Invitation to Offering

In Ruth we read of the encounter between two refugees, Naomi and Ruth. Naomi is a refugee in Moab due to famine in Judah, and Ruth is a refugee due to patriarchal systems that rendered single women utterly vulnerable. Both Naomi and Ruth took refuge in Naomi’s land, and they survived such tumultuous transitions because each one gave the greatest gift: their very selves.

By participating in the One Great Hour of Sharing offering, we follow God’s command to love. Through this ministry we stand in solidarity with the most vulnerable. Through our giving, we as a Church stand in solidarity with refugees as they seek to rebuild their lives.

Yet this time of offering—of giving a portion of our financial resources—is only the beginning of our call to give. Jesus declared, “No one has greater love than this, to lay down one’s life for one’s friends” (John 15:13). In addition to your financial gift, consider other ways that you can accompany refugees, and how you can remain open to ways that others might minister to you.

Let us give joyously and generously at this time.

Prayer for the Offering

Leader: For your divine providence, we thank you, ever-generous Creator. In responsive humility, we have rendered unto you these gifts of our material possessions. We entrust them to you so that through them, your Church may live out its call of solidarity and accompaniment. May the witness and work made possible by our tithes and offerings comfort and empower those seeking refuge, that they may be able to sing with peace and joy “the Lord’s song in a foreign land” (Psalm 137:4).

Invitation to Communion

Leader: In the time of Ruth, the Holiness Code of the Law required that farmers not harvest the corners of their fields or recover produce that was dropped during harvest. That food was left to be collected by the marginalized, the poor, the stranger, the refugee—for people like Ruth and Naomi. This Law was for the sake of the less fortunate so that no one—no one—would hunger in the land.

Christ declared, “I am the true vine” (John 10:10). As the vine, Christ provides life and livelihood to us who are attached to him, and there is plenty of suspense for all to draw on him. At His Table we find a gleaning field where all are fed and no one is turned away. There is plenty for all, including the Ruths and Naomis of this world.

We are nourished at this Table of Abundance so that in turn we may live abundantly a life of neighborly love—a life lived for the other. In the Incarnation, God goes where we go and stays where we stay, assuring us as God’s people. In response, we stand in solidarity with refugees and those deemed “outsiders,” assuring them with words and acts, that in Christ they always have refuge.

Benediction/Charge

Through song, prayer, word and fellowship, we have been challenged to stand in solidarity with the stranger, the foreigner, the refugee—to accompany the most vulnerable as an expression of love for God. We have been nourished by the Word, both proclaimed and served at the Table. Therefore, my sisters and brothers, go into the world as God’s agents of reconciliation. Have the courage of Christ to lay down your life for others. Hold on to what is good and just. Return to no one evil for evil, but instead help the suffering. Honor all people. Love and serve God, rejoicing in the power of the Holy Spirit. Amen!

The One Great Hour of Sharing offering this year focuses on refugees and displaced persons. There is no better biblical story to accompany this work than that of Ruth and Naomi.

Brief yet profound, in the opening passage of Ruth we encounter the resilience of two women who have been widowed, as well as ravaged by the natural disaster of famine. These ecological and socio-political events rendered Naomi and Ruth the most vulnerable in their society. Just like refugees today, Ruth and Naomi did not have the privilege of choosing to stay in their homes, but were forced to relocate.

The Book of Ruth can be read as both a human story and a God story, the former “incarnating” the latter. As a human story, we read about the spirituality of solidarity, which is richly encapsulated in verses 16 and 17. In the divine realm, we read of God’s redemption, which is mirrored or reciprocated in the human act of solidarity.

Redemption means that God stands in solidarity with us. Many times when we hear the story of Ruth, the human archetype for God is Boaz, the “kinsman redeemer” who “redeems” Ruth, securing a life for her. But the divine act of redemption can also be seen in the sacrificial commitment Ruth makes to Naomi to go where she goes and stay where she stays. The mutuality of their relationship is good news for a globalizing world that so often separates people into groups “them” and “us”.

Applying the words of the theologian Roberto Goizueta to Ruth, to operate out of a mindset of community and mutual encouragement is to apply “a theology of acompañamiento [acompañamiento]”. In other words, the God who abides in the Ruth story is revealed in the very act of accompanying the most vulnerable in society—both then and now.

Similarly, God is revealed to us in our accompanying of the refugee. As God walks with those who have been displaced, we may see God as we walk together with them as well. Consequently, we, like the refugee, come face-to-face with our own need and vulnerability; seeing God in the midst of all that is. This is an opportunity for Christians to reignite faith and reframe our humanity in our encounter with the faith and humanity of the other. We are able to recognize the transforming power of solidarity, not just for “them” but for “us.” After all, through the eyes of acompañamiento, there is only a united “us”!

The passage in Ruth can be approached in many ways. Here are three ways (not mutually exclusive) of entering the story of Ruth and proclaiming its implications for the Church’s ministry with and for refugees:

A. The Ruth/Naomi covenant personifies the Church’s call to justice for refugees. Reading about their journey through the lens of our globalizing world (and the refugee phenomenon it engenders), and viewing our globalizing world through the lens of Ruth and Naomi’s journey, we can hear our call to stand with refugees as a mutual act of vulnerability and hope. Solidarity is a spiritual discipline because by engaging in it, we encounter God.

B. Each stanza of line in verses 16 and 17 can serve as a structuring device to explore dimensions of solidarity. For example, “Where you go, I will go,” asserts that incarnational presence is foundational for solidarity; and “your people shall be my people” calls for identifying with “the other”. The spiritual depth of solidarity can be highlighted by the stanza “your God my God”. In a world where the power of words is depleting, this in-depth “word study” centeredness in verses 16 and 17 might help recover the substance of the word “solidarity”.

C. There are two planes (one explicit and the other implicit) on which the Ruth narrative operates: the human and the divine. The act of solidarity is the human corollary of the divine act of redemption. A good approach to the two planes might highlight the relationship between our theology and our ethics. In other words, our vision of God should inform our way of being in the world. In Ruth, the portrait of God is painted by two women choosing solidarity. God is therefore one who chose to stand in solidarity with us, whether we are from Judah or Moab. There are various theological traditions from which to draw, including liberation (God accompanying those who suffer), and Eastern Orthodox (incarnation as God taking on flesh to be in “solidarity” with all flesh).
SUGGESTED PROPS
Wear a hat, use a walking stick, carry a backpack and a water bottle.

After greeting the children, announce that you’re getting ready to take a trip, and ask, “Who has ever left their home to go on a trip like me?”

Wait for a show of hands, and then ask a few of them where they went, and why they went. Was it vacation? To visit family?

Then ask how long the trip was. Two days, three? Maybe even a whole week? Ask the children who they traveled with. Did they go alone? Or did they have someone to help them on their journey?

Then make the connection to the story of Ruth
“In our Bible story today, a woman named Ruth and her mother-in-law Naomi went on a trip, too. But they didn’t leave their homes for fun. Ruth and Naomi lived in a country with very little food, and they were hungry all the time. So they had to leave their home to find a new place to live where they wouldn’t be hungry anymore.”

Then make the connection between Ruth and Naomi and refugees in the world today.
First ask, “When you went on your trip, were you ever afraid? Maybe to leave your home, or to fly on an airplane, or see things or people you’ve never seen before?” (Wait for a few responses.)

“Did you know that there are millions of people in our world today who are afraid, but not when they leave home—when they ARE home. More than half of those people are younger than 18 years old—close to your age! These boys and girls live in dangerous places, and just like Ruth and Naomi, they often don’t have enough food to eat. So they have to do exactly what Ruth and Naomi did: find a new home where they will have food and water, and finally be safe from danger.”

Tie in the One Great Hour of Sharing offering
“Here’s the good news: Just like you didn’t have to go on a trip to someplace new all by yourself, people who are trying to find new, safe homes today don’t have to be alone, either. Today in church we are taking up a special offering called One Great Hour of Sharing. The money we collect from this offering will help refugees around the world as they look for food and for safety. Giving our money to help is our way of walking together with them, even though we’re far away—hand in hand, just like Ruth and Naomi.”

Finally, make sure to emphasize that we are all equally loved by God
“But do you know what the very best part of all this is? No matter where we go, and no matter where we are, we are never alone because God is always with us. God is with us right here, right now, and God is with our brothers and sisters who are hungry, thirsty, or in danger around the world, too. God loves all of us the same and walks with all of us—especially when we’re afraid. So in the same way, we should also walk with each other.”

Close with a prayer
“Dear God, Thank you for always being with us, and thank you for walking with refugees all over the world. We pray that you would watch over our brothers and sisters who are afraid and in danger. Please use our offerings to bless those who need a safe home, and help us to walk together with them, just like Ruth and Naomi. Amen.”

Children

Supplies: Blank puzzle with large pieces from a craft store, OR, a very large piece of thick paper. (Size of puzzle/paper depends on size of classroom.) Washable markers, colored pencils, or crayons.

Preparation: On the blank puzzle or paper, write in large letters with a black permanent marker, “We walk together.” Using the black marker, add the outline of a footprint (or several) to represent refugees and displaced people around the world. Then take the puzzle apart/cut the paper into large pieces of different shapes.

After reading the story of Ruth and Naomi, distribute one piece to each child and place them in pairs. Explain to the class that, just like Ruth and Naomi, they will have to work together in order to complete the task. Tell the class that their job is to trace their partner’s footprint onto their paper piece, and that they will need to be a team in order for it to work. Explain that in helping their partner, they are being an example of what it is to be a servant: helping with their friend’s need. (Note: be sure to use WASHABLE marker for this exercise.) After everyone's foot has been traced, ask them to color it in with their favorite colors, however they’d like. Ask them to make it their own—the best expression of their unique selves.

While the class is coloring, take this opportunity to expand the lesson. Ask the students if the activity would have been more difficult if they had to do it alone. Ask how having a partner changed the activity, and why it was important to “walk” with someone to complete the task.

Now is also a great time to tie the Scripture lesson in with the One Great Hour of Sharing offering. Ask if anyone knows what it means to be a “refugee,” and explain the word and concept to the students. If the class is old enough, mention that there are nearly 60 million refugees world wide, and more than half of them are under 18 years old. Share that refugees are persons who cannot return to their home country because of fear of persecution. You might also share that Internally Displaced People (IDPs) are those who have been forced to leave their homes as a result of conflict, but are still living in their country of origin. Tell the students that giving money to the One Great Hour of Sharing offering is our way of walking with refugees and IDPs from far away. Be sure to help the students understand that Ruth and Naomi were refugees, too, and had to walk together to leave their home and find food and safety.

Explain to the students that their footprint represents the journey of Ruth and Naomi, as well as the journey that all refugees must take to escape danger and start a new life. Explain that just as it was easier and better for Ruth and Naomi to journey together, and just as it was better for each child to create a footprint with a friend, so it is also easier for a refugee when they have help in their time of need. (Suggested additional reading: Ecclesiastes 4:9–10.)

Now for the fun part. Ask the students to put all of their unique, individual pieces together as a group. Explain that every person has an important piece that is needed to complete the picture. Be sure to emphasize that every little boy and girl around the world—no matter where they are, or if they’re hungry or thirsty or in danger—each one of them has a unique footprint/piece of the puzzle as well. Explain that, as God’s children, we need to walk life’s journey together, helping each other, just as Ruth and Naomi did.

Intergenerational

Walk an extra mile. Literally.

In the weeks leading to the One Great Hour of Sharing offering, promote the offering by encouraging the congregation to participate in a community walk to raise awareness for refugees. Consider calling the event the “Extra Mile Walk,” or “Solidarity Stride.”

Map out one (or several) one-mile routes through your church’s neighborhood or downtown. After worship on One Great Hour of Sharing Sunday, as a congregation (in one group or several), walk the route once and then again, literally going an extra mile together. As you go, plan to offer some kind of service to the community: pick up trash along the road, pass out information about refugee relief, distribute water bottles or popsicles or hot chocolate to every person you meet on the way, or give blankets, hats or gloves to the homeless. Get creative with ways that you can impact your community.

If you can, wear matching shirts, bracelets, or bandanas to demonstrate your solidarity. When people ask what you’re doing say, “We are going the extra mile in solidarity with the 60 million displaced persons around the world, because Jesus asked us to love our neighbors near and far.” (An alternative option is to ask parishioners to do the same thing on their own time during the week as small groups or families, with the addition of inviting folks to come to church on Sunday.)

At the end of the walk, host a simple meal at the church to celebrate. Invite the community to attend. Use the time to raise awareness of displaced people around the world, and what we can do to “walk the extra mile” with them. Make sure to talk about the things we can learn from those we serve, and how in walking with others, we are blessed by the joy of giving. Consider showing one of the new OGHS videos on refugees found at www.ucc.org/oghs_oghs-videos.

Souad and Rahaf: Syrian Refugees

Help for Those Who Need It

Before Surgery

After Surgery
Souad Kasem Issa combs the hair of her daughter Rahaf, 9. She is a Syrian refugee in Amman, Jordan. She and her husband and six children fled the city of Homs as fighting there worsened in 2012. Their home in Syria has since been destroyed by bombing, and they are struggling to survive in Jordan’s capital city, where they now live.

Our faith calls us to respond to people in crisis. Unfortunately, crisis such as war, disaster, changing climate or a devastated economy have forced millions of people over the years to seek safety as refugees.

Today, our world is facing a refugee crisis beyond anything we have seen in recent generations. At this moment, there are more refugees in the world than at any time since World War II. Millions of people are alive today only because they have escaped perilous situations.

The One Great Hour of Sharing offering is rooted in responding to Christ’s call to welcome the stranger. The offering provides assistance beyond emergency food, water and shelter.

The United Church of Christ has stepped forward to serve as co-sponsors, mentors and friends to newly arrived refugees on behalf of the Church, helping people in need begin a new life free from violence, persecution, or a shifting climate. The offering provides financial support to help refugees, such as the Issa family, who are living in a country that’s not their home. We are helping families begin a new life with hope for a better future.

As we respond generously, may we recognize that in giving, we are on a personal journey to live in Christ’s image!

Help for Those Who Need It

2 year old Adi went to Christian Hospital Mungeli (CHM), India after suffering seizures and severe spasticity, symptoms of hydrocephalus resulting from tubercular meningitis. Before his parents took him to CHM, they tried to take the small boy for treatment closer to their home, to no avail.

The CHM surgeons placed a shunt in the small boy to drain the excess fluid buildup in his brain. He then began physical therapy and has improved significantly.

3 months after the initial surgery, Adi went back to see the doctors. Today he is bursting with a 2-year-old’s energy. The shunt is working, and he is responding well to anti-tuberculosis drugs. With his ongoing work in the physiotherapy department, Adi is expected to have continued improvement.

One Great Hour of Sharing supports three Mission Personal at the Christian Hospital Mungeli, India. Anil and Theresa Henry are long-term physicians who helped turn the hospital around after it had been closed for many years, and Kahala Cannon, a Mission Intern working at the hospital has been there for a short time. They and other hospital staff are providing critical care to their community. People from both near and far utilize Christian Hospital Mungeli whenever they need emergency medical care.

Discuss the situation described and its relationship to your household.

Remember to take your offering box to church on the day when the One Great Hour of Sharing offering will be received. Then you and I are the channels of God’s love and grace to the world in need. Sometimes you and I are the channels of God’s love and grace to the world in need.” —Mark Pickett, OGHS contributor

We pray that you would show us ways that grace can be a blessing to them, and remind us all of the ways we, by feeding the hungry and giving comfort to the displaced, are helping create self-sustaining communities that are now flourishing around the world. Give five units as you feel led.

Give two units to make that help! Contribute one unit.

Choose an amount for these units that is most appropriate for your household. Each day you may feel called to give as God guides you in the moment. Focus on those issues that are most applicable for your household.

Both joy and compassionate urgency infuse God’s great love for this world, and should likewise infuse our love for others shown through One Great Hour of Sharing.

United Church of Christ Special Mission Offerings (SMOs) exist to allow congregations and individuals to meet people at points of critical need in their lives. Though many options exist for direct, individual support of these needs, the SMOs allow a common witness and make a collective positive impact. Our church has identified four areas where these critical human needs exist:

- in places lacking health and educational resources and where disaster has struck;
- within systems of injustice which oppress daily life and opportunity;
- in the lives of church leaders without sufficient resources to live with dignity;
- in the nurture of youth and congregations just beginning their lives of faith.

We believe these SMOs collectively serve to lift people closer to the abundance and wholeness to which Jesus Christ has called us to work together to bring about.
